A Sign of Better Times

Employees of the Dominion Government have noted that the country is more prosperous, and are asking for their share of the improvement through an upward revision of salaries. The champion of the plans under consideration at Ottawa would increase the expenditure by $8,000,000, while the plan the employees want would add $15,000,000 to the troubles of the tax-payers.

It would be ignoring human nature to suppose that the latter will hail the news with enthusiasm. They may, however, find consolation in the philosophic reflection that it is a sign of better times. A request for more pay was about the last thing the employees could expect to prosper a couple of years ago. That they are making a demand of such substantial proportions goes to show that from the official standpoint prosperity is a present fact, and increasing prosperity the outlook.

The Motor Business Humming

Things seem to be moving nicely well with the motor industry of Canada, a good deal better than those interested in the business predicted when the duty on imported cars was cut down a couple of years ago. The output last year was 26 per cent more than for the year before, and 50 per cent more than in 1924. Altogether more than 200,000 cars, trucks and tractors were turned out of Canadian factories last year. The interesting fact is that, instead of having to close their doors, these concerns have had to speed up production to meet a volume of orders larger than they were ever handled with before, by a very substantial margin.

The pedestrian, by the way, will be reassured to note that there is really only one car on the streets and roads in Canada to forty-five people on the sidewalks. Some times at the corner of First and Jasper the proportion seems to be reversed. That is only an optical illusion; and what the salaried term the "point of saturation" is still a long way off. With growing prosperity the outlook is for still busier times around the motor works, and for a cutting down of the heavy plurality at present enjoyed by those who do their travelling on foot. It is the sale of new cars, not the street accident, that is thinning the ranks of the pedestrians.

The Revolver Trade

Chief of Police Shute suggests that legislation be sought which would prevent the sale of fire-arms at second hand stores and forbid the display of these in shop windows. It is the traffic in revolvers, no doubt, that he seeks to check, as revolvers are being made to check the same traffic elsewhere.

At present it is forbidden to carry a revolver in one's pocket, but not to buy one. The argument is inconclusive, and while buying is allowed without restriction it is useless to expect that the carrying of the concealed weapons can be prevented. Conditions here are not the same as elsewhere in Canada, or in most of the states of the Union.

Dealers sell revolvers as they sell bread or cheese. In consequence, for all the police know to the contrary, every second man on the street may be "toting a gun." There is a demand on either side of the line that the prohibition be shifted to the dealer, and that he be made illegal to come into possession of a revolver without a permit, and therefore without knowledge of the law officers.

It will be recalled that under restriction was introduced at the last session of Parliament, but failed of enactment before chaos engulfed the proceedings and made an end of the law-making. It is probably to be introduced at the opening session, and there is a fair prospect that it will become part of the criminal code of the whole Dominion. The recommendation of the chief is in confirmation of the object of this legislation, and is in line with the recommendations of law enforcement officers elsewhere.

Allying Suspicion

From Paris comes the cheering news that "full agreement" has at long last been reached on the armament question, about which the Allies and Germany have been wrangling ever since they stopped fighting. The Inter-Allied control commission is to be abolished, and the League of Nations will undertake to ensure that Germany does not build up another war machine under cover. The terms of the agreement, however, will carry less significance attached to the fact that France has never been convinced that Germany was the aggressor in the war as ended. It has protested on several occasions that armies which were recruited and trained as police or militia forces, and that arms and munitions were being manufactured on a scale that could only mean a prospective renewal of hostilities.

If Paris is content with the new security, one more cause of friction has been removed, and one which undermined the whole structure of international confidence. While France believed, rightly or wrongly, that Germany was plotting a new war, their dealings necessarily rested upon a basis of false pretences. Guiltless of plots, the two countries can now meet each other in commerce and in diplomatic contacts without mistrust. Whether the League is a more dependable keeper of Germany's conscience than the commission was, France apparently is willing to rely upon it, as it was willing to rely upon the commission. The promise of that newly established confidence will ensure that the two countries directly concerned. The other Allied countries will find reassurance in the attitude of France.

Observations

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Strange things I've seen along life's way,
But here I met it down
The life of a junkie who Was honored by his town.

I've never known a loss to graze
On man who has not the right
I've never seen a good soldier
Who has not a good wife.

We talk of luck and fortune's smile,
But luck must not be learned.
A grinning cannot sharpen knives
From the hand it is turned.

Behind the beauty we admire,
The lovely things we see,
Are tears and hours of weeping told Ere such delights could be.

And when I find a well-meaning leech
As down the street I pass
I know some white-headed man
Gone out and ate the grass.

Youth and Religion

By DR. FRANK CRANE

At the Religious Education Congress held at the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, several speakers voiced their views of the youth of today, asserting in their own words that the youth of today is not the youth of yesterday. Dr. Lewis, president of George Washington University, held that this is the most serious and most important generation in history.

One of the speakers, a "youth-mad" man, said, "I've seen from church and college. Yet we may call them the youth of today. They are the youth of today. Give them a religion that ties up with life and death, and they will be yours."

There has been a good deal of talk and it is quite popular to say that the youth of today is "lost," that it is rampant and that it has departed from the standards of religion. There never was a greater mistake. There were many serious-minded youth as there ever were.

In fact, the questions of conscience and of God and the future, which were the mind of the youth that it does upon the interest of old age.

But the youth of today is not the youth of yesterday. The youth of today is not the youth of yesterday. The youth of today is not the youth of yesterday. The youth of today is not the youth of yesterday.

Former religious leaders, of course, are not seriously considered any more, but the reason is that they have no relation to life. We do not hear much these days about discourses concerning the church or the Trinity or the mode of baptism, or such things.

The trouble is that these questions have nothing to do with the youth of today. The youth of today is not the youth of yesterday. The youth of today is not the youth of yesterday. The youth of today is not the youth of yesterday.

We should buy ourselves out with our theories that the youth of today is not the youth of yesterday. The youth of today is not the youth of yesterday. The youth of today is not the youth of yesterday.

But the questions of conscience, of duty and of honor spring eternal in the human breast and the youth will be found to be as much devoted to these questions as youth has ever been.

Do You Remember?

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Edmonton Bulletin, Saturday, January 29th, 1917.
C. F. Ritz has been instructed to secure a full list of all the children who were born in the city of Edmonton, from the year 1877 to the present time, and to have it printed and distributed to all the parents of children born in the city of Edmonton, from the year 1877 to the present time.

What do it? He repeated. "He's, who murdered my brother?"

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Death strikes GARRETT FOLSON while swimming with a party of friends at Ocean Town, N.J. At the Hotel Majestic, where they had all been dining, an inquiry is begun, after a doctor, unfortunately examining him on the beach, pronounced him dead.

Folously companions had been ROGER NEVILLE. MRS.
HELEN BARNARD and CAROLINA VALDON. It is established that Folson had been standing near the water's edge, when he was killed. NEVILLE, who Folson's sister, ANASTASIA, is now in New York. Then the startling announcement made that Folson had been stabbed to death in the water.
BUT, the valet, is questioned, as as Barnes and his wife, but no light is shed on the mystery.
Anastasia arrives and encountered Neville, who had been her brother's associate in business.

NEWS FROM NORTHTOWN

CHAPTER XI

"Why are you here? Haven't you got any more?" "Come, you can go to Mrs. Valdon's apartments. You must sit at her side!" "Why does everybody want me to sit at her side?" "I want to investigate my brother's death. And remember, Roger Neville, I know you. I know the details. I had only the telegram that Garrett was dead.
Then I came here and I find that his name are in the charge of the police. I want to see the man before I can ask him about all this. I had no wish to ask the hotel but now perhaps you will tell me the truth."

"Of course, dear Miss Folson, but here, I love of you. Dear, he spoke low, "my many are already clustered around you. They pretend to be taking around themselves but you can see, they are greedily listening."

Anastasia Folson raised her head high and gave the curious onlookers a stare.

"You are right, Roger," she said
"I want to stay here as long as I have. Let Fanny and Rose bring my things and take me anywhere, anywhere that we can talk."

Anastasia Folson turned her head and her quick through the throngs to the elevator and took her to the suite occupied by Mrs. Valdon and Mrs. Barnard.

"I arrived war not unexpected, for Neville had got in search of Anastasia with orders to bring her back with him."

"The good old thing," cried
Carolina as she opened the door.
"Come right in and let me take care of you," was the response, but the tone of voice was different.

"I'm not the kind to be taken care of," Anastasia replied, rather than ungrateful. "Who is that?"

"It was a strange thing, but the speeches of Anastasia Folson though they were of words, were accompanied by a smile of good nature which seemed to take her questioning her glance at the Duchess was one of admiration, though her questioning was brusque.

"This is my dear friend, Mrs.
Barnard," Anastasia introduced.
"I usually called the Duchess "Flapper Fanny" and hearing," interrupted Miss Folson, holding out her hand.

GASOLINE ALLEY

So Tame It Was Almost Disappointing

—By King

A telegram for me, she said. I don't expect any more. Colly, it makes me kinda faint! Somebody must be sick or a accident or something! Why don't you open it? Glory be, open it! I'm afraid to open it, maybe it's bad luck! Who kin it be from I can't imagine. Get that safe open kid and we'll duck wit' de swag. Goodie.

THE NEBBES

News from Northville

—By Sol Hes

Oh mama, a letter from my daddy. Read it to me! Daddy says everything's a wonder. That cousin Ambrose has advanced enough money to pay off all debts and finish the hotel and will be there to live soon. Sends you a kiss and a hug and wants to know if you're a good boy. Emma, it looks like we were going to Northville to live. How would you like to go back with us? I'd miss you terribly if you didn't go. To go any place with you, Mrs. Ness, but that's a terrible place. I like the city where there's something doing all the time. Where most people are too busy to mind your business. The town is so small, that the crows and frogs only let out a half-hearted chirp, afraid some body'll think they're bragging.

WINNIE WINKLE, THE BREADWINNER

Write and Let

—By Banner

I wouldn't let Fannyham so seriously. Mother, ever since that memory book tell on his head, he hasn't been responsible for what he says. I was Japan, whisked up by Tuttle, and introduced by him to the girl. I'm glad to see you, Mr. Japan. Miss Folson's welcome was quite evidently sincere. It is not cordial. I'm going to make it worse for her help in finding the murderer of my brother. I certainly hope to do that, Miss Folson. I don't expect you to do it, I expect you to help me. I told I look to you for help. To Be Continued

SHE'S BEEN ORPHAN AN' THEN PEDDLED IT - WELL, I SENT HER ROUND TO THE SERVANTS' ENTRANCE - SHE OUGHT TO FEEL RIGHT 'BOUT THERE - LET HER GET SOME - THERE'S MUCH MORE THEY CAN DO TO ME HERE ANYWAY.

LITTLE JOE

It's Not Possible for Kids to Be Too Bad for Parents to Be Proud of Them

WELL, I WONDER WHO THAT OLD FART IS WITH THAT SWELL CAR. I TELL YOU, DADDY, DO YOU KNOW AND MRS. VALDON PUT AN ARM AROUND ME AND SAID, 'YOU ONLY MAKE MATTERS WORSE WHEN YOU TALK. NOW ANASTASIA, SHE'S GOING TO PUT ROGER OUT AND I'M GOING TO GIVE YOU A KISS AND A HUG AND LET YOU RELAX A LITTLE. THEN YOU MUST GO TO BED. ANASTASIA FOLSON GAVE HER A COMICAL LOOK AND THEN BURST INTO A LAUGH. 'I THOUGHT YOU KNEW ME BETTER!' SHE SAID. 'I KNOW, DADDY, BUT I DON'T LIKE A SLIPPER AND KISSING FROM 'N' J. ONE.' AND CERTAINLY THE STRONG, FORTU- NATELY GENERAL BUILT OF IT TO BE THAT OF
